

BANDIT GANG LOOTS TRAIN; THREE KILLED

SCORE OF MEXICANS ENACT BLOODY NIGHT ROBBERY LAST NIGHT NEAR BROWNVILLE.

JERK RAIL FROM TRACK

Engine and Two Cars Ditched After Which Raiders Begin Shooting at Frightened Passengers.

Brownsville, Tex., Oct. 19.—Twenty Mexicans, who claimed to be followers of Luis de la Rosa, leader of a self-styled Texas revolution last night, looted a passenger train in the southwest of this city, and killed three men and wounded two others. The Mexicans as they shot and robbed cried: "Viva Pizarro! Viva Carranza!"

The holdup occurred on the St. Louis-Brownsville branch line, the only railroad entering the lower Rio Grande valley. The train was carrying a passenger car, a baggage car, and a Pullman sleeping car. The bandits, who were armed with revolvers and shotguns, forced the train to stop near Brownsville. They then looted the baggage car and the Pullman car, and killed three men and wounded two others.

The robbery was the boldest piece of work by bandits since their raids began three months ago. The bandits removed the spikes from the rail and lying concealed in a nearby brush jerked this rail from under the nose of the engine with a chain which was attached to a pulley and maul and express cars jumped the track. The front truck of the engine, which was carrying a load of coal, was derailed and the engine and two cars were derailed.

negro chauffeur, hid beneath a seat, but the Mexicans saw his feet, stole his shoes, and also took his grip and left him, and coat hanging on the window. Hearing he found his hat and coat were gone, he said he had $280 in his coat pocket in addition to $90 he concealed under the seat. A word said after the killing started the bandits began shouting "Viva Pizarro! Viva Carranza!"

Telephones News. "Doc" Sterritt, negro porter on the train, was one of the first to reach a telephone, after running three miles to the residence in his stocking feet. His shoes had been taken away by the bandits.

Other Booty. After finishing the smoker the Mexicans robbed the day coach passengers, mostly of small amounts of money and jewelry. Mr. and Mrs. Finkelstein of Houston reported that Mrs. Finkelstein lost a diamond ring and $50 in cash. Mrs. Finkelstein saved one diamond ring by the simple expedient of turning the stone around toward the palm of her hand, so that the Mexicans thought the ring a slender gold band. Except for robbery, no one was injured in the day coach.

Conductor. E. A. Moran saved himself by turning into a toilet room, as he was going forward in the train to investigate the accident. The wreck occurred about midnight, but the train was running thirty miles an hour to make up lost time.

Short Time. The robbery was completed in fifteen minutes. The mail clerk and the express messenger reported they were not molested. The first men to reach the train were five oil well drillers, camped about 1,000 feet from where the holdup occurred. These men crept up close but seeing they were outnumbered by the bandits they remained in hiding until the Mexicans left. The bandits made no attempt to attack the well drillers.

Made Search. United States and county officers today made a thorough search through Mexican village of Villa Nueva, located five miles from Brownsville on the American side, and near where the bandits were seen to escape from Las Rucas, Mexico, four miles above Matamoros.

SKINNER TO BRING INSIDE INFORMATION REGARDING BLOCKADE

United States Consul General at London Will Arrive Wednesday to Report to Lansing.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Robert Skinner, American consul general at London, will sail for New York on Oct. 20. He will come immediately to Washington, where he will give the state department a first hand report on trade conditions in England and on the methods used by Great Britain in diverting and holding up American trade. After Mr. Skinner makes his report he will remain in Washington for several months and act as special adviser on trade matters. He will be retained here in that capacity because the foreign trade advisers whom former Secretary Bryan appointed were inexperienced.

Robert Rose, one of the Bryan appointees, resigned some time ago. William B. Fleming, who was also appointed by Mr. Bryan, is now in charge. Several months ago Great Britain sent Sir Clifford Crawford to Washington to handle all questions concerning American trade. He is an expert in every feature of the subject. Hereafter he will deal with Mr. Skinner, and it is believed that American shippers will have more success in getting their cargoes through.

Skinner an Efficient Man. At the time of his departure, Mr. Skinner is generally praised as the most efficient man connected with the consular service. After making a thorough study of the British system of blocking English exports at the expense of American legitimate trade with neutral countries, Mr. Skinner reported the facts to the state department in a conditional memorandum.

The publication of this report, showing clearly that Mr. Skinner had gotten to the core of the British system of blocking American trade at the expense of American commerce, irritated the British government. Jordan Stabler, a young and inexperienced second secretary of the legation, was sent to London to handle the trade situation as far as the embassy was concerned.

Mr. Skinner's methods of going to the bottom of things and paying little attention to the diplomatic niceties of the embassy did not agree with the British notions of diplomatic propriety. Eventually all American business men sought out Mr. Skinner when in trouble and he drew his attention to the embassy. Jealousy was aroused between the embassy and the consulate.

Direct Methods Puzzling. When Mr. Skinner had obtained every scrap of available information concerning trade conditions and had puzzled both the foreign office and the American embassy by his direct methods, the state department decided he should come to Washington and lay all the facts before Secretary Lansing.

It is probable the department will transfer Stabler to some minor legation and send Mr. Skinner to London as the experienced secretary of the embassy, who will be able to report on the various trade features. Mr. Skinner will continue to draw his salary as consul general. Secretary Lansing has not decided how long Mr. Skinner will be attached to the state department, but it is declared on the highest authority that he does not return to London. He will be sent to one of the other first class capitals. He will not suffer in his official standing. Reports that he will be sent as ambassador to Mexico are without foundation.

Permitting of Judgments Against State Employees Now in Full Effect. Madison, Wis., Oct. 19.—The law passed by the last legislature permitting the filing of judgments against persons employed by the state, or in any of its state institutions, and allowing the retention of certain amounts to liquidate these judgments is evidently becoming popular with creditors, but is imposing many additional hardships on the state employees. The law requires, however, that these judgments must be filed within thirty days after they are entered. A number of these judgments have been filed in from other state institutions where the judgments were of a longer period and of course returned.

ITALY CASTS LOT FOR WAR ON BULGARIA

WAR DECLARATION IS ISSUED BUT NO MOVE IS MADE AS YET TO SEND TROOPS.

LACK DEFINITE NEWS

Allies Claim to Have Taken Bulgarian Town While Germans Are Reported to Be Advancing into Serbia.

Rome, Italy, London, Oct. 19.—Italy has declared war on Bulgaria, according to an announcement by the Stesani News agency.

London, Oct. 19.—Italy has declared war against Bulgaria, but the question whether she will send troops to join British and French forces in Serbia remains as obscure as the result of the fighting raging on Serbia's eastern frontier.

The Austro-German armies which occupied Belgrade appear to have advanced more than fifteen miles into the city, but the outcome of fighting between Bulgarians and Serbians along the important Saloniki-Nish railway cannot be summed up so easily.

Reports Differ. At two points, the northernmost of which is Vranja, the Bulgarians assert they have reached the railroad, while the south the Serbians are reported to have driven back the invaders. Both Athens and Paris maintain that French troops have occupied Strumitsa in southern Bulgaria, but there are available no official reports relating to the struggle in this quarter, and none is expected until the fighting reaches a more conclusive stage.

Expect Fighting. The removal of General Sir Ian Hamilton from command of the Dardanelles forces was received in England with mixed feelings, coming on the heels of rumors of a possible withdrawal from the Gallipoli peninsula. In the best informed circles, however, the appointment to commander-in-chief of General Sir Charles Munro is generally regarded as indicating that the campaign will be prosecuted with renewed energy as the country has great confidence in the new leader.

Telegrams Forward. Berlin, Oct. 19.—The Austrian army which is invading Serbia over the Save front along the northwestern border, apparently has no serious well under way after meeting determined opposition from the Serbians. Army headquarters today announce the capture of the town of Obrenovac.

South of Belgrade on the Danube front, the Austrians have made a further advance. The troops of General Horvath, who are moving toward several points of strategic importance.

Aide Italy's Enemies. Paris, Oct. 19.—The Havas correspondent of Rome telegraphs that the Italian government by order of the king declared that a state of war existed between Italy and Bulgaria by reason of Bulgaria having opened hostilities against Serbia, thus aligning herself with the enemies of Italy combating with their allies.

Reinforcements to Balkans. London, Oct. 19.—The decision of the cabinet to send reinforcements to the Balkan front is indicated in a dispatch from Athens today to the Exchange Telegraph company. It is said this decision has been communicated to the Greek government.

Greece is Watchfully Waiting. Paris, Oct. 19.—A Havas agency dispatch from Athens, dated Monday, quotes the government newspaper, Neos Aghoras, as saying that the Greek government is following with the greatest interest the development of military operations on the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier, and that the Greek government is waiting for the decision of the great powers.

Repute Hand-Grenade Attack. Paris, Oct. 19.—Three German attacks with hand grenades last night to north-east of Saloniki, were repulsed by French forces, according to the French official statement given out by the war office this afternoon.

Paris, Oct. 19.—Heavy losses for the Bulgarians in the fighting which preceded the capture by the allies of Stremitsa, is reported in a dispatch from Belgrade today to the Havas News Agency. It is asserted that the entire battalions of Bulgarians were annihilated by Franco-Serbian forces.

ZEPPELIN WRECKS FACTORY CHIMNEY

AUSTRIAN OFFICER COMMITS SUICIDE

Shoots Himself Rather Than Undergo an Operation Which He Feared Would Be Fatal.

London, Oct. 19.—General Pickler, of the Austro-Hungarian army, committed suicide today by shooting, according to a dispatch from Vienna. The officer feared the dispatch about that an operation which he was about to undergo, would not bring him relief.

LINE CITY COUNCIL PLAN BALKING MAYOR IN LIGHT PLAN VETO

City Dads Want New Boulevard Lights But Mayor Vetoes Plan and Council Plans Fight.

Beloit, Oct. 19.—Another disruption between members and Mayor Adams of the common council impends. At the regular meeting of that body held last evening the aldermen voted to install an extensive system of boulevard lighting in the city over a route of about a mile. Mayor Adams has already vetoed the matter on a previous occasion and today at noon stated that he would again extend his power of veto on the matter. Members of the council are determined on the installation of the lights and are organizing to pass the measure over the mayor's head.

The council voted to adopt the one assessor plan and to elect this week officials at their next meeting two weeks hence. He is to receive a salary of $2,000 a year.

The aldermen also acted favorably on the plans for the establishment of erection of a mausoleum in the cemetery here. A lot 100x150 feet, property of the city will be sold to a private company who will erect the building which plans now call for a cost of $75,000. The structure will be 50x38 feet and will be built of marble. The interior will be furnished in marble. The building is to be finished within the year. The sale of the vaults will be made in the winter.

Bank Sells Property. The Beloit Savings bank this morning disposed of, at a consideration not given, two acres and a foundry building in South Beloit, formerly the property of the Thompson plow works, to the Beloit Foundry company and the machinery to the Rumley, Wachs Machine company of Chicago. The foundry company will install the machinery to the new building this week. The bank in some way acquired the entire holdings of the Thompson plow works through a mortgage. They still retain about fifteen acres of the property.

The Y. M. C. A. has now 1,250 members in the Beloit association. An assistant physical director is to be appointed at the next meeting of the board.

URGE IMPROVEMENT OF MISSOURI RIVER BY THE GOVERNMENT

Committee of Over Two Hundred Persons Advance Reasons For Improving River For Traffic.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 19.—The Missouri Valley's struggle for a continuance of government support in improving the Missouri river was continued today by a meeting of representatives of civic organizations, shippers and farmers appeared before a board of army engineers to show why the board should not adopt the report of Lieutenant Colonel Horber Deakney, who, in April, 1915, recommended that the $20,000,000 project for improvement of the waterway be abandoned as impracticable.

Over two hundred persons from the territory drained by the river and from tributary districts affected by a change in government policy to ward it were in the commercial club rooms when the board convened, W. P. Borland, representative in Congress from the fifth Missouri district, on behalf of the supporters of the river, made a lengthy and eloquent review of the history of the stream. It contained testimony from farmers, shippers and commercial organizations, setting forth reasons for continued improvement of the river.

"We intend to show this board," said Representative Borland, "that the movement of traffic on the Missouri river between Kansas City and St. Louis has grown more rapidly than the improvements of the river by the government have progressed. That notwithstanding the disadvantages of improvement on a partially improved river, commerce has shown a marked increase each season as the shipping public became familiar with the advantage and cheapness of water transportation."

The growth from 1914 to 1915 was 142 per cent. Much of the traffic moving down stream is the surplus agricultural products of the states west of the river. These products move in high grade merchandise, such as dry goods, pianos and shoes.

"There is not an inland waterway in the United States today showing as large a percentage of traffic in high grade merchandise as the Missouri river between Kansas City and St. Louis. The stream is in the direct line of east and west traffic and necessarily influences rates on all of the country to the west and south of it. It is a great factor in the rapid growth of traffic in this territory, and the river is needed as an additional and highly expensive means of communication."

STATE BOARD HAS NO CONTROL OVER SCHOOL FINANCES

Attorney General Rules That Board of Education Does Not Control Money of Common Schools.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 19.—That the state board of education has not exclusive control over the finances of the university and normal schools is the opinion of Attorney General W. C. Owen expressed in an opinion to the state board of education today. Mr. Owen points out that the new specifically appropriates the money of the university and normal schools for the supervision of the state board of education, but does not do so with reference to the other educational institutions of the state.

"Upon the study and consideration of this statute as a whole I am persuaded that it was not the intention of the legislature in this act to give the state board of education positive or direct control over the disbursements of moneys appropriated to the educational institutions enumerated in subsection 8 of the act or any of them," declares Mr. Owen. "I am therefore of the opinion that the state board of education is not empowered to require the educational institutions enumerated in the act to submit to the board for its approval budget or estimates, and that the authority of the board to require such submission is not conditioned upon approval of such estimates. This is not in conflict with the duty and authority of the board of education to require such budgets and estimates to be submitted to it in the aid of its duties to inquire and advise. This conclusion of course does not apply to expenditures for new buildings or lands purchased."

The opinion points out that it is not intended to apply to the university and normals, where the appropriations were made direct to the board.

BOGUS COUNT HELD ON BIGAMY CHARGE

New Yorker Known as Count Lynar Laudon In Toombs In Default of $10,000 Bail.

New York, Oct. 19.—Max Lynar, also known as Count Lynar, who was arraigned on charges of bigamy and committed to the Tombs in default of $10,000 bail, attorneys sought to have the bail reduced, but this was opposed because it was thought the department of justice had filed certain important information concerning Lynar with the district attorney, John A. B. Jones.

It is imperative that Lynar be present when his trial is called. When one of his lawyers told the court he was suspected by the government of being a German spy, the court refused to reduce the bail.

Amelle Windt at Poughkeepsie, New York, also under the name of Count Lynar, was arrested in London in 1911, and under the name of O'Brien, later on in 1914.

BRITAIN MAY FACE CRISIS IN CABINET

SIR EDWARD CARSON'S RESIGNATION DENOTES SERIOUSNESS OF THREATENED RUPTURE.

ASQUITH IS TAKEN ILL

Premier Will Be Forced to Retire As a Result of Poor Health—Conscription and Near East Questions Cause Split.

London, Oct. 19.—Great Britain is waiting anxiously to learn whether the cabinet ministers will be able to compose their differences and continue the government without swapping horses in midstream. The military difficulties which confront the allies have taken a position of secondary importance for the time being.

Frequent Meetings Held. Speaking in Dublin last night, the Balkan crisis developed. Since the Balkan crisis developed, both newspapers and politicians agree that vital differences of opinion have arisen over conscription, the near east and the near east question. In the meantime party newspapers are carrying on a bitter debate and exchanging accusations of lack of patriotism and of placing party and private interests above those of the country.

The resignation of Sir Edward Carson, attorney general, was the first proof of differences in the cabinet. The reason assigned for his withdrawal is disagreement in the cabinet's policy in regard to the near east, but the specific point of division is withheld, as in the case of the threatened resignation of Foreign Minister Delcasse of France, in whose footsteps Sir Edward appears to have followed.

Coalition Cabinet Totters? Speaking in Dublin last night, John Redmond declared the position of the coalition government was precarious. "Any day we may be faced with another reconstruction," he said, "or with a reconstruction which would end the political truce and render the British people into contending factions."

The cabinet and the country as a whole are in a state of confusion. The party lines as a calamity. If such a contest were fought on the question of conscription it might be expected to result in great bitterness and class distinction.

The anti-conscriptionist newspapers are demanding a fair trial be given to the plan of voluntary enlistment under the direction of the Earl of Derby before there is any further talk of a change.

Premier Asquith Ill. London, Oct. 19.—Premier Asquith has suddenly become ill. His state of health will require withdrawal from public activities at least for a few days.

Shortly before one o'clock the following bulletin was issued at Downing Street: "The prime minister is suffering from an attack of gastro-intestinal catarrh, which will necessitate a few days of complete rest."

Earlier in the day Mr. Asquith attended meetings of the committee and cabinet members held in his official residence.

Lloyd-George in Commons. In Premier Asquith's absence, David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions, led in the house of commons this afternoon and steered off all propounders considered "awkward questions."

"It is impossible at present," was his reply to a request for a statement regarding the situation in the Dardanelles.

As to Italian co-operation in Serbia, Mr. Lloyd-George only was able to say "Methods whereby Italy most effectively co-operate in helping Serbia in the common cause, are under discussion among the allies."

COUNTY FAIR PLANS OF LADIES FOR "Y" RAPIDLY MATURING

Committee Finds Many of City Ready to Co-operate to Make Exhibit Successful.

Friday evening the big county fair to the benefit of the Janesville Young Men's Christian Association will be thrown open to the public, complete in every detail. There will be surprises galore for those who plan to take in the show. The committee ladies who originated the scheme are working hard and thus far have been able to meet with success in every feature they have undertaken.

Something new in the line of sandwiches will be introduced. This will be a creation of ice cream and pastry, and according to the committee, Janesville is to have the distinction of being the first city north of Newport, Palm Beach and Atlantic City to be permitted to have the delicacy. The committee has acquired the rights of the patented sandwich and will use it to good advantage on Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and evening, the period of the fair.

In the line of amusements it is expected that the Janesville Young Men's Association will take all blue ribbons, although this absurd statement must not be taken as a criterion of any of the other shows which will be along the midway. The booths are prominent in city life and to thoroughly enjoy oneself this week, this attraction as well as the entire county fair must be visited. It was stated by one lady this week that "if the Dixie Highway had been routed through Janesville it would have an infinite task to select Miss Bowler City, considering the class to be seen in this magnificent collection of Janesville belles."

Mrs. A. J. Pegelow will give an exhibition of aesthetic and fancy dancing. Miss G. Shurtliff has promised to make a big batch of candy for the candy booths, which will be many.

TWO ELDERLY WOMEN GRANTED DIVORCES

Beloit Couple Separate After Thirty-eight Years of Married Life—Woman of 73 Sued.

Two elderly women, one passed the allotted age of three score years and ten, and the other just over the age of sixty, were plaintiffs in actions for divorce in Judge Grimard's court Monday afternoon in a brief court session which followed the calling of the October term calendar.

Christine L. Johnson of Beloit, the younger of the two applicants, sought a divorce from Louis L. Johnson, aged 62 years, on the grounds of desertion. They had been married for thirty-eight years, according to the records in the case.

The second applicant was Rose A. Farmer of Evansville, 73 years of age, who asked for a separation from her husband, Elmer W. Farmer, aged 74. They were married in 1905. The question of alimony was left open for future determination by the court.

Coffee Dwarfs Children Physically—Mentally

Prominent School Workers Assert Coffee Drinking School Children are Underweight and Backward in Studies.

The State Board of Health of Texas has been making inquiries into the effects of coffee upon school children. "Children who drink coffee for breakfast," says one report, "come to school exhilarated, they work strenuously in the morning, and are overflowing with energy and vitality, BUT THEY DO NOT LAST." Under the school routine, they become fatigued more quickly than the other pupils, and by the close of school in the afternoon they are exhausted to the point of stupor. They are nervous and therefore unstable in their deportment."

It has also been found by other investigators that children who drank coffee average from one and one-half to more than four pounds less in weight, and from one-half inch to more than one inch less in height, than the children who abstained from coffee. They were also found to have an average of three pounds less in hand strength than the children who never drank coffee.

It is to their parents' advantage to give them instant Postum as the hot morning beverage instead of coffee. This delicious food-drink resembles coffee in looks and flavor, but is entirely free from the disturbing coffee drug, caffeine, or any other harmful ingredient.

SUSPENDS SENTENCE ON THE TWO WOMEN

Women Plead Guilty and Men Not Guilty to Minor Statutory Charge Monday.

Mrs. Frank J. Dunn and Anna Swinke, the two women arrested with James Quinn and Leo Lenartz at the Dunn residence on Racine street, were arraigned before the municipal court at four o'clock Monday on a complaint of being inmates or resorting in a disorderly house. Quinn was also brought before the court at this time.

Both of the women pleaded guilty to the minor charge as the more serious statutory count was not made against them despite the fact that the evidence is clear that they were in a more severe count. The Swinke woman went throughout the short session and Attorney Charles E. Pierce appeared for the defendants. A plea of guilty was entered for the two women and on recommendation they were fined twenty-five dollars and costs. Then Judge H. L. Maxwell suspended the fine on the condition that both women were to be in court next Monday night. The Swinke woman dried and both left the court room in haste.

James Quinn pleaded not guilty and his case set for trial on November 1st. The case of Leo Lenartz was furnished. This is the same date as the case for Leo Lenartz is set for trial. Lenartz pleaded not guilty to the same charge Monday afternoon noon.

COOKING CLASSES TO BEGIN TONIGHT

Two Classes in Cooking for Women at the Evening School.—Beginners and Advanced.

The evening school for the season of 1916 and 1917 is nearly in complete organization with the exception of a few classes. The two classes in cooking are of great interest to the women. There is a class for the person who has a practical knowledge of the art of cooking and for the one to learn the first steps in making simple dishes.

The class that meets tonight at the high school is under the supervision of Miss Grace Mathews. This class takes up the first steps, such as menu planning and buying, and preparing luncheon dishes will be prepared during their class hours. It is not too late to enroll in this class and those who wish to can do so tonight.

The class in advanced cooking meets Wednesday night with Miss Beth Bailey as instructor. Women are eligible for this class if they have had the ordinary experience that any woman who has been cooking must have. There are eight enrolled in this class and there is room for eight or ten more. The other classes of the evening school have a fairly large enrollment.

SHOOTING SEASON OPEN.

Just how far the ultra progressive idealists will go before they are checked still remains a question. Under the regime of the Wisconsin idea we have found any number of commissions to rectify this evil, abate that, remedy this custom and abolish the other. Men who have been appointed for no other purpose than to create a vast political machine for use of the dictator under the provisions of the primary law. In a way these evils have been lessened but not entirely done away with. During the last legislative many bills were introduced that never saw the light of day outside a committee room that were of the freak type, but none so radical as is suggested by Talcott Williams, head of the Pulitzer School of Journalism in New York.

Consider this fact first and foremost. You can not create a journalist, you can not cram knowledge into the head of a student, give him theoretical practice and turn him out a full-fledged journalist. In fact, there is no such thing as a journalist on the American newspaper. They are the product of the environment under which they have been brought up. The true instinct of news gathering is born in the individual, not taught him. You can not make a whistle out of a pig's tail, nor any more can you make a newspaper man out of order.

However, Talcott Williams branches out from the realm of facts into the misty vista of dreams and announces the time is coming when the reporter will have to take a state examination and pass before he can obtain a position on a newspaper. He believes journalism will be placed under state regulation and states will impose examinations on aspiring news writers much the same as they are imposed on lawyers, doctors and others, before they can practice their art. If this is all the schools of journalism teach, then the public should awaken to the ideals of progressivism and either bow their heads in obedience or raise a protest that will be heard in the proper quarters.

We have a school of journalism at the state university. The heads of this department are young men of excellent training in literary lines with a grand theoretical knowledge of the work of constructing a daily newspaper is accomplished. How the news is gathered. From what sources obtained and how handled when secured. Recently one of the instructors informed his class that they obtained all marriage licenses from the city of the student who protested that they came from the county clerk's office where the law says they must be issued, and whether convinced or not he lost one student from the class promptly for his slip. Yet this same instructor has written a text book the students in the journalistic course are compelled to purchase and study, and yet he knows nothing more than that they are to be used.

But Talcott Williams goes still further than the instructor with a text book to sell, a few months' experience during the summer on some city paper and a college degree. He would place the whole army of newspapermen under a civil service examination. If this is all the so-called journalistic schools have to offer to the public they have been created in vain. There is a new field for schools of instruction for future newspaper workers and writers. It is a broad field and should be taught by men who have had actual experience in the working field, not by theorists.

Our average graduate of the grand schools, which include the high schools of the state, has received a smattering of learning which is extensive but not concrete enough. In fitting a man or woman for the daily grind of a newspaper, be it metropolitan or in a medium-sized city, there are many things that can be added to the knowledge that will be most beneficial to them in their life's work. English grammar, writing, spelling and punctuation of good, clear grammatical sentences and paragraphs, are most essential factors. History of this country and foreign nations, political economy, languages—particularly French, German, Italian and Spanish. The list could be continued. There should be a course in law, teaching the rights of the writers as regards libel and the rights of the public as regards the publication of this or that bit of news, but it is not necessary for the aspirant for a position on a newspaper to take a civil service examination before accepting a position.

What would have happened to modern journalism if Horace Greeley had been forced to take a state examination? Where would Benjamin Franklin have finished the list? How about Charles W. Childs, who sold papers where he later owned his own paper and block in Philadelphia? Yes, and come down to modern days, how about Horace Rubens, of the Milwaukee Sentinel, and dozens of other men in our state, if they had been subjected to such rulings; men who learned their cases before they took up the pen and pen of the reporter and editorial writer; men who have made this country and written their names in the annals of the newspaper world?

Newspaper writers are born, not manufactured. They can be broadened, their efficiency increased, their source of learning and store of knowledge made greater, but it can not be done by theorists and literary men who have not had actual experience of years in the actual working field. The owner of the educational authorities awake to this fact the better off for the future generation of news writers.

The shooting season is now open and if you want some good pot shots take a few at the theorists who tell us that the marriage licenses are obtained at the city clerk's office, and that reporters will some day be licensed as are dogs and other species of animals before they can obtain a job. Pah!

THE CARRANZA AFFAIR.

On October 12th the administration formally announced its purpose to recognize Victoriano Carranza as president of Mexico, which was foretold under date of September 22d. A great effort is being made by the administration to create the impression that the recognition of Carranza is the "Pan-American plan," but it is only in so far as the Pan-American diplomats, having been called into conference by Secretary Lansing, and finding that such recognition was President Wilson's plan, have finally acquiesced in it. It is possible that in view of the hopeless muddle into which President Wilson had, by his unwarranted and meddling interference, plunged the affairs of Mexico, Carranza's recognition was the least objectionable step that could be taken, but that it will have the effect of solving Mexico's difficulties or will restore order is hardly hoped by those familiar with the conditions and acquainted with Carranza's character and record. Even this administration is sceptical regarding Carranza's ability to restore order, as is shown by the formal warning immediately sent to American consuls in Villa territory to get Americans out of the country as fast as possible. The recognition of Carranza is, of course, the occasion of gratification to Mr. Wilson's personal pride. He had decreed that Huerta must go, and to compel obedience to his mandate has from the first been his chief aim in Mexico, and he has been troubled by any scruple as to right or justice in accomplishing his end. Having eliminated Huerta and reduced the unfortunate republic to anarchy, it became necessary either to intervene by force or to recognize some one of the several bandits who dominated affairs. Carranza is at least less cruel and profligate than Villa, if no more can be said of him. If Carranza can save off intervention at least until such time as there is a competent administration in charge of the military establishment by this government, all true Americans will be thankful.

The American people for the next six months can't lose any more money betting on baseball, but the war stocks will give them all needful opportunities in that direction.

Chicago has now experienced two dry Sundays and does not relish the idea one bit. Soon, however, Sunday clubs will spring up just as they have in Pennsylvania and even in New York where the Raines law is in effect. This will solve the problem for the thirsty ones and defeat the grand idea of closing the dram shops one day a week at least.

Any government that can endure with half its citizenry foreign and clinging to the beliefs of their natal country, even unto the second and third generation, is something unknown in history before and the experiment will be interesting to watch.

Now that the public learn that they can either burn their leaves in streets not improved or have them collected in improved and cilled sections there is nothing to complain about until something new arrives. If the Turks don't look out, there is claimed that the automobile habit is a menace to public health because it leads people to give up walking. But just think of the splendid exercise in jumping enjoyed by the great mass who still do not own machines.

Congress is soon to assemble and then it will disassemble doing some actual work. Increasing the national defenses promises to be an interesting task for our nation's hardest working citizens—the average congressman.

It is hoped the supreme court sustains the income tax, as the mass of the people have patriotically decided to permit the payment of it by their wealthy neighbors.

Some men don't feel confident of their ability to drive an automobile safely until the whole party lines up in front of a roadhouse bar and every one stands treat.

This century appears to have run to more Jane Addamses than Joan of Arcs and still the world wars go on about the same way as it did a few centuries ago.

It will probably be possible to determine where President Wilson spends his evenings without having congress appoint an investigating committee.

Sidewalks require a good deal of cleaning nowadays, as for some unknown reason the women refuse to wear skirts long enough to do the sweeping.

In the states voting on suffrage, the politicians are boldly announcing that they will vote for suffrage provided they decide it will be the best thing to do.

There will be no Armenians left in their game preserves. A closed season for a few months every year is necessary to keep the species from becoming extinct.

It seems to be the first item of the day's newspaper work at Washington every morning to call up Margaret Wilson and ask her if she is engaged yet.

The people who say that baseball is all crooked may merely be thinking how they would run it if they had the handling of all that money.

President Wilson should be very careful not to get his notes to the Kaiser and to Mrs. Galt exchanged into the wrong envelopes.

Love.
If somebody loves you,
You cannot be sad;
You've cause for rejoicing,
You've cause to be glad.
You've subject to some
As you journey your way,
If somebody loves you
You ought to be gay.

If somebody loves you,
You're bound to get gay
And blow in the cash
In a wild reckless way.
If somebody loves you,
You'll part from your self
And make quite an all-around
Fool of yourself.

If somebody loves you
You'll write foolish notes
In love-dovey language
Upon which she dotes.
She'll save them and sue you
And wed you by force.
The lady will find for
The plaintiff, of course.

Didn't Raise Them.
A young housewife who lives in a suburban town went to the village store to make some purchases.
"These chickens look very nice," remarked the customer, pausing before the poultry counter. "How much are they?"

One dollar apiece, madam," was the prompt response of the obliging proprietor. "You can't find better poultry for the money in the whole country."
"One dollar," thoughtfully mused the customer, and then added: "Did you raise them?"

Oh, no, madam!" was the hasty assurance of the misunderstanding storekeeper. "That is the same price I offered to sell them for yesterday."

Looking now to the right, then to the left, then to the right, now to the sweater staggered along under the weight of the heavy trunk.

"Officer," O'Tieby suddenly blocked his way.
"Is there a dead body in that trunk?" he demanded.
"I'm not sayin'" replied the little man in the striped sweater.
"A murdered body?"
"I'm not sayin'."
"All hacked and cut to pieces somethin' sinful?"
"I'm not sayin'," persisted the man
under the trunk.
"A-ha, another trunk mystery," thought Officer O'Tieby shrewdly.
"I command you to take that trunk around to the 55th District Station House."

"Take it yourself," said the little man, and dropped it. O'Tieby picked it up and bore it to the station house, forcing the little man in the point of his revolver.

"Way, O'Tieby," exclaimed House
Sergeant Tobozon, "how is it yer study unnecessary for common and high school students. If the young people wish to read, play games, have music or visit in the evening, well and good; but the place for their school-books, in our experience, is in school. It is a sorry thing to send a healthy child off to bed with a head full of long division, trigonometry or the square of the hypotenuse. You couldn't blame such a child for being peevish next day.

Early to bed and early to rise, we take up the question another time.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Elastic or Non-Elastic?

Is a silk elastic stocking or a non-elastic, fitted, laced stocking preferable for one with varicose or swollen veins?

Answer—A well-fitted, non-elastic laced stocking, or rather a pair for each leg, we think better.

Belt For Whooping-Cough.

Please tell me whether a belt worn about the abdomen is helpful for a child with whooping-cough. How should it be made?

Answer—Yes. Make it of linen, five inches wide and two or three inches short of reaching around the abdomen at navel; eyelets and lace behind, over the undershirt; on each side a two-inch wide elastic insertion.

Household Hints

BUREAU COVER OF SWISS.

An attractive bureau cover may be made of Swiss, with dots, in large as a dime, two or three inches apart. On the other side make petals of shadow embroidery for each dot and on the right side work the dot over in yellow. The result will be a sort of old daisies.

WHEN EGGS ARE HIGH

Here is an excellent dessert good any time, but particularly valuable just now when the price of eggs is soaring. Have one quart of water boiling in a wide two-quart pan. Add a small stick of cinnamon, a pinch of salt and one cup of sugar. While this is boiling stir in rapidly three tablespoons of tapioca. When this is cooked fifteen minutes until it looks clear or transparent, add as much cornstarch and apples as will fit easily in the bottom of the pan and then either bake or steam about one-half hour. Serve when cold one apple to each portion with a few spoonfuls of the Tapioca. Cream or milk can be served with it. Do not forget the stick cinnamon—it is a necessary ingredient.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

In opening a dress pattern, write the number of pattern on each separate piece of tissue paper; will save time and trouble in identifying stray pieces when replacing them in the proper envelope.

To quickly mend stockings when they are past darning, trim ragged ends and patch with darning.

Roast Lentils—Soak two cups of lentils over night. Next morning boil them three hours in the water in which they were soaked. Mash them and add a large cup of soft bread crumbs, an onion minced, two rounded teaspoons butter, pepper and salt to taste, a cup of crushed walnut meats and one egg. Mix and bake one hour. Serve with tomato sauce.

Baked Ham—A thick slice of ham covered with a paste made of three tablespoons of brown sugar, pinch of mustard and a little vinegar. Bake three-fourths of an hour in covered dish.

The Sauce That Works Wonders—Melt two tablespoons butter; stir in two tablespoons flour; dissolve with a cup of milk to a smooth paste. To this add half cup vinegar, four tablespoons sugar, paprika and salt to taste. Cook together until thick and creamy and use in the following ways: Cook lima beans until tender, then add enough sauce to make a

WISCONSIN WOMAN HEADS TUBERCULOSIS BUREAU

Ethythe Tate Defeated Male Competitors for New $3,000 Position Recently Created in Calif.

Miss Ethythe L. M. Tate, former state organizer in Wisconsin for the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, and more recently executive secretary of the California Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, with headquarters at Los Angeles, has won a $3,000 position as director of the Tuberculosis Bureau of the State Board of Health, by virtue of achieving first place in a competitive examination held by the California Civil Service Commission, in which there were ten other contestants.

By making a grade of 97.83 per cent, Miss Tate distanced the three successful male contestants—Dr. J. L. Pomeroy, Los Angeles, county health officer; Guy P. Jones, morbidity statistician of the state board of health; and Dr. E. M. Williamson, former health officer of Sacramento.

As director of the tuberculosis bureau, Miss Tate will have supervision of a $75,000 fund appropriated by the legislature at its last session, of which $65,000 constitutes a subsidy to pay $3 per patient to county hospitals, who, on inspection, are shown to come up to the standard of the state board of health.

Miss Tate was largely instrumental in securing the passage of the law making the large appropriation.

DO NOT TAKE SCREENS OFF UNTIL THERE IS TWO SUCCESSIVE FROSTS.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 18.—Have there been two killing frosts two nights in succession?

If there have, then you are safe to go ahead and take the screens off the windows. If not, then you had better wait while.

This was the advice handed down by Dr. George C. Ruhland, Milwaukee health commissioner today.

"Don't be in a hurry to get the screens off the windows," said the physician. "Flies are not killed with one hard frost. It takes two in succession."

SIDE TALKS BY RUTH CAMERON

Enamel People.

"I never saw anyone so improved," said Molly, the little stenographer lady.

"In just what way?" asked the cynic.

Molly wrinkled her nose, thoughtfully. "She seems softer and more human."

"Was she inhuman before?"

People That You Can't Get Close To.

"Silly!" with an intonation that robbed it of any harshness. "You must know what I mean. She was always witty and amusing and interesting, but there was a kind of hard finish on top of it all that made you feel as if she were shut up somewhere away from you. If you tried to get close to her you felt as if you were sliding off some hard slippery surface. She made me think of beautiful shiny cold things, like enamel and diamonds."

The cynic laughed heartily at this characterization, but even without knowing the particulars of the question, I thought it very clever.

You see I know other people whom it fits.

Don't you?

People whom we would like ever so well if we weren't somehow held off and repelled by that peculiar hardness.

Since I heard Molly's characterization I have been calling them enamel people, and trying to pick out the qualities that put that enamel on their personalities.

Too Much Prosperity Often Enamels People.

It seems to me that self-consciousness is one of them; a fear of being imposed upon another, conceit is another, money worship and overweening ambition, also have that effect. Sometimes so much prosperity seems to put this hard finish on a character that would otherwise be pleasing and attractive.

There was a woman in our town who for years had everything her own way. She married better than any of her friends, she traveled, she had lovely clothes and charming children. She had been a girl of considerable charm, but the uninterrupted success seemed to put a veneer of self-satisfaction and lack of sympathy over that charm. She was brilliant, interesting, successful, but no longer as attractive as she had been. And then, all of a sudden, there came a break in the course of her prosperity. One misfortune after another overtook her. It was as if the blows of fate broke the veneer. She softened and humanized and once more became one of the most charming and beloved women in the community.

We Admire But Don't Love These People.

We may admire people whose character has this brilliant hardness, but we don't love them. Of course, a character needs some hardness to give it firmness and force, but the point beyond which it is a drawback is easily reached. They would rather be admired or loved?

Is there any undue degree of hardness in your character?

These are two questions I asked myself. Perhaps you'd like to ask me of yourself.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

The Battle-Cry

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
Author of
"The Call of the Cumberland"

"Notin' kain't stand between me an' what I've got ter do, Anse," he said slowly. He did not speak now with wild passion, but calm finality. "I've done took ter oath."

For a while Anse Hovey did not reply. At last he said quietly: "I reckon ye've got rid of the idea that I was aimin' to deceive ye, Jeb. I told ye that when Fletch's assassin came back to the mountains I'd let ye know. I'm goin' to keep my word."

Jeb rose suddenly from his chair and stood with the fire lighting up his ragged trousers and the frayed sleeves of his coat.

"Air he back now?" he demanded. Anse shook his head.

"Not yet, Jeb; but he's comin'." He saw the twitch that went across the tight-closed lips which made no comment.

"Jeb," he continued, "I want ye to help me. I want ye to be big enough to put by things that's hard to put by."

The boy shook his head. "Anse," he replied slowly, "ask me ter do anything else in God Almighty's world, but don't ask me that, 'cause if ye does I've got ter deny ye."

"I ain't askin' ye to let the man go unpunished. I'm only askin' you to let me punish him with the law."

Astonishment was writ large in every feature of Jeb's face. He stood in the wavering circle of light while the shadows swallowed the corners of the cabin, and wondered if he had heard rightly. At last his voice carried a note of deep disappointment, and he spoke as though unwilling to utter such treasonable words.

"I reckon, Anse," he suggested, "ye wouldn't hardly hev asked a thing like that afore"—there was a hesitating halt before he went on—"afore a fur-rin' woman changed yore fashion of lookin' at things."

Anse Hovey felt his face redden, and an angry retort rose to his lips. But the charge was true.

He went on as though Jeb had not spoken. "All I ask is that when that man comes ye'll hold your hand until the cote has acted."

"Does ye reckon Milt McBriar aims ter sidin' ter kin of his?" was the next incredulous question.

Anse Hovey's voice broke out of its quiet tones and his eyes woke to a fire that was convincing.

"By heavens, I aims ter have him do it! I ain't askin' leave of Milt McBriar." Then he added: "I aims to hang the man that kill your daddy in the jail house yard at Peril, an' if the McBriars get him they've got to kill me first. Will you hold your hand till I'm through?"

The boy stood there, his fingers slowly clenching and opening. Finally he said: "Hit ain't goin' ter satisfy me ter penitentiary that feller. He's got ter die."

"He's goin' to die. If I fail, then—the cleanest raised his hands in a gesture of concession—"then he's yours. Will you wait?"

"I don't hardly believe," said Jeb McNash with conviction, "any man livin' in kin keep Milt's hired assassin in no jail house long enough ter try an' hang him. But I'm willing ter see. I'll hold my hand that long, Anse, but—"

Once more a spasmodic tautening of muscles convulsed the boy's frame and his voice took on its excited note of shrillness: "But I warns ye, I'm goin' ter be settin' in ther high cote. I ain't never agoin' ter leave bit, an' if that jury clars him—or if they jest penitentiaries him—I'm goin' ter kill him as he sets that in his cheer—so help me God!"

Loyal to their stubborn adherence to feud obedience, the judge and grand jury secretly returned two indictments bearing the names of Luke Thixton, Sr., as principal and Milton McBriar, Sr., as accessory to the crime of murder against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth of Kentucky, and contrary to the statute in such case made and provided. Also, they withheld their action from public announcement.

Surprisingly and guardedly a message-traveled up the watercourses to the remotest Hovey cabin. Bad Anse bade his men be ready to rise in instant response to his call, and they made ready to obey.

One day Juanita Holland and Dawn set out for Lexington to do their Christmas shopping.

Anse Hovey rode with them across to Peril and waved his hat in farewell as they stood in the vestibule of the rickety passenger coach. It was a very shabby car of worn and faded plush, but to Dawn it seemed a fairy chariot.

As they entered the lobby of the Phoenix hotel, in Lexington, a tall youth rose from a chair and came forward. He was a boy of a fairer and darker and less trim in appearance than his Blue-Grass brethren, he carried his head as high and walked as independently. He came forward with his hat in his hand and said: "I'm mighty glad ter see ye, Dawn."

The girl looked about the place, and breathed rather than asked: "Isn't the world wonderful, Milt?"

Two days followed through which Dawn passed in transports of delight. There were the undreamed sights of shop-windows decked for the holiday season, and the crowds on the streets, and the gaiety and merriment of Christmas everywhere. She had never heard so much laughter before, and she found it infectious, and laughed, too.

At last she found herself again in a faded plush car beside Juanita, with Young Milt sitting opposite. Old Milt was on that train, too, but he paused only to nod before disappearing into the shabby smoking compartment, where he had business to discuss.

A man was waiting for him in there whom old acquaintances might have passed by without recognition. It was the hope of Milt McBriar that when they left the train at Peril, any acquaintances who might be about would do just this.

While the Christmas shoppers laughed in the day coach, Luke Thixton received final instructions in the empty smoker.

He was to pass as swiftly and unobtrusively as possible through Peril and go direct across the ridge.

He and Milt would leave the train without conversation or anything to mark them as companions. After that Luke knew what he was to do, and no further conference would be necessary.

It was noon when the train rumbled again over the trestle near the town, and all morning a steady, feathery snow had been falling, veiling the sights from the windows and wrapping the mountains in a cloak of ewan's-down.

At last the trucks screamed, the old engine came puffing and wheezing to a tired halt, and the two girls, with Young Milt at their heels, made their way out, burdened with parcels.

On the cinder platform Juanita looked about for Anse Hovey, and she saw him standing in a group with Jeb and several other men whom she did not know—but Anse's face was not turned toward her, and it did not wear the look of expectancy that the thought of her usually brought there. Jeb's countenance, too, was white and set, and a breathless tenseness seemed to hold the whole group in fixed tautness.

There were several clumps of men standing about, all armed, and every face wore the same expression of waiting sternness.

A gasp of premonition rose to Juanita's lips as she caught the sinister spirit of suspense in the atmosphere. Then Milt McBriar stepped down from the smoker vestibule, followed by another man.

As the two turned in opposite directions on the snow-covered platform, one of the men who had been standing with Bad Anse Hovey laid a hand on the shoulder of the clean-shaven arrival and said in a clear voice: "Luke Thixton, I want ye fer fer murder of Fletch McNash."

Old Milt McBriar, for once startled out of his case-hardened self-control, wheeled and demanded angrily: "What hell's trick is this?" His eyes were blazing and his face worked with passionate fury.

A deputy answered him: "An' Milt McBriar, I wants you, too, on an indictment fer accessory ter murder."

Juanita felt Dawn's spasmodic fingers clutch her arm and her own knees grow suddenly weak. She heard a clatter of parcels as Young Milt dropped them in the snow and leaped forward, his eyes kindling and his right hand frantically clawing at the buttons of overcoat and coat. But before he could draw, Jeb McNash had wheeled to face him, bending forward to a half crouch. The younger McBriar halted and bent back under the glint of the revolver which Jeb was thrusting into his face.

Haveys, armed and grim of visage, now began drawing close about the captives.

Dawn clung with bloodless lips and white cheeks to Juanita as she watched Jeb holding his weapon in the face of the boy whom she suddenly realized she loved more than her brother.

Then the sheriff spoke again. "Thar hain't no use in makin' no trouble, Milt. Ther grand jury hes done acted, an' I reckon ye'd better let the law take its course."

"Why don't ye take me, too?" demanded Young Milt in a tense, passionate voice. "I'm a McBriar. That's all ye've got against any of these men."

"The grand jury didn't indict ye, son," responded the sheriff calmly. Then the elder McBriar became suddenly quiet again and self-possessed. He turned to his son.

"Milt," he said, sternly, "you keep outen this. Ride over home an' tell every man that calls hisself a McBriar—his voice suddenly rose in the defiant crescendo of a trapped lion—"tell every man that calls hisself a McBriar that ther Haveys hev got me in ther damned jailhouse—an' ask 'em if they aims ter let me lay thar."

Young Milt turned and went at a run toward the livery stable. Over his shoulder as he went he flung back at Jeb, who stood looking after him with lowered pistol: "I'm goin' now, but I'll be back ter reckon with you!"

And Jeb shouted, too: "Ye kain't come back none too soon, Milt. I'll be hyar when ye comes."

Then the group started on their tramp toward the courthouse and the little jail that lay at its side.

Juanita suddenly realized that she and Dawn were standing as if rooted to the spot. The older girl heard an inarticulate moan break from the lips of the younger, and then, as though waking out of sleep, she looked absently down at a litter of beribboned parcels which lay about her feet. That message which Old Milt had flung back to his people on the lips of his son would send tumbling to arms every man who could carry a rifle!

And the Haveys were grimly waiting for them. The Haveys were already there. The two girls could not ride across the ridge now. They could only sit in their room at the wretched hotel and wait, too.

Juanita was glad Dawn could cry. She couldn't. She could only look ahead and see a procession of hideous possibilities.

It had been a few minutes after noon when Young Milt had rushed into the livery stable and ordered his horse. In that one instant all his college influences had dropped away from him, and he was following the fierce single star of clan loyalty.

His father, who had never been any man's captive, was back there in the vermin-infested little jailhouse, a prisoner to the Haveys. And when Young Milt came back, the one Hovey he had marked for his own was the Hovey under whose pistol muzzle he had been forced to give back—young Jeb McNash.

The stroke had taken the McBriars completely by surprise. The boy must reach his own territory and rally them to their fullest numbers, even from the remotest coves. This battle was to be fought in the enemy's own stronghold and against a force which was ready to the last note of preparation.

So nothing could happen until tomorrow. Nothing would happen, in all likelihood, until the day after that, and meanwhile the two girls in the hotel must sit there thinking.

The little town itself lay dismal and helpless, with its shacks scattered over its broken and uneven levels.

Dawn, perhaps, found it hardest; for in this one day Dawn had grown up, and tomorrow would bring the boy whom she now confessed to loving, though she confessed it with self-contempt, leading a force to meet that of her own people, fighting to avenge her father. Juanita, whose eyes could not escape ironical reminders when she glanced down at the Christmas packages, seemed to hear over and over the voice of Anse Hovey saying: "I'm doin' it because ye asks it."

She had sought to avert an assassination, and it seemed that the effort would precipitate a holocaust.

Anse was very busy, but he found time to come to her that afternoon. In the bare little hotel lobby the firelight glinted on many rifles as their owners looked about the hearth.

And in Anse she saw once more the stern side. His face was unsmiling, and in his eyes was that expression which made her realize how inflexibly he would set about the accomplishment of the thing he had undertaken. Then, as he spoke to her, a sudden softness came into his eyes.

"God knows I'm sorry," he said, "that this thing broke just now. I didn't aim that ye should be no eye-witness."

Juanita smiled rather wanly. Old Milt, he told her, would soon be released. "We ain't even goin' to keep him in the jailhouse no longer than mornin'." We couldn't convict him, an' it would only bring on more trouble."

"Why was he arrested?" she asked blankly.

"Just to keep him out of mischief overnight," he smiled. "Even the law can be used for strategy."

"What will happen when the McBriars come back?" she demanded in a shaken voice.

He shook his head. "I can't hardly say," he replied.

But the next morning Anse Hovey came again and cautioned the two women not to leave their rooms and not to keep their shutters open. All that day the town lay like a turtle, light drawn into its shell. Streets were empty. Doors were locked and shutters barred. But toward evening, to the girls' surprise, they saw Haveys riding out of town instead of into it. Soon there were no more horses at the racks. By night the place which was to be assaulted tomorrow seemed to have been abandoned by its defenders.

Old Milt McBriar had ridden out in the morning, freed but wrathful, to meet the men who were hurrying in. The figure of Bad Anse Hovey she saw often from her window, but for the most part the force of Haveys had evaporated.

Then followed another wretched night, and with forenoon the snow-wrapped town settled down to the empty silence of a cemetery, but with early afternoon the new procession began to come in. A long and continuous stream of McBriar horsemen, each armed to the teeth, rode past the hotel and went straight to the courthouse. Then she heard again the sound she had heard on her first night in the mountains, only now it came from a hundred throats.

It was the McBriar yell, and after it came a scattering of rifle and pistol shots. The clan was going away again and shooting up the town as they went, but what had happened down there at the courthouse?

MORRIS MILLER

Philadelphia leads every other city in the United States in the development of girl swimmers. Aquatic followers have been surprised by the remarkable feats performed by Beatrice Whitelaw, 4½ years old, and Florence McLoughlin, a little miss of 11 years, and two young Tuckermans, Helen and Ruth, 12 and 13 years, who recently held their own against expert women swimmers in the hard test at Brighton beach, gave a striking exhibition of proficiency.

Since the National league was started in 1876, there have been fifty-nine pennant struggles between the National and fifteen in the American league. In all these battles only one pennant was ever won with a mark under 600. The Detroit Tigers turned the trick in 1906 with 538, when they needed only Cleveland in the American league dash. This year the Tigers set a new runner-up record by winning over 100 games.

Bill Donovan has caught the fever and is hiring college players. Carl Jenkins, a Union college football and baseball star, is the latest acquisition to the Yankee pitching staff. In addition to other qualifications, Jenkins is the son of the chief of police at Glenn Falls, N. Y., has been suggested to Smiling William that he might test out his theory of heredity by giving the youth a trial behind the bat, on the grounds that he should be a handy in corraling base stealers.

In a game of baseball the pitcher throws the ball toward the batter. In whose possession is the ball while in the air? This is not a question asked in any of the major league training camps, nor has it any bearing on the result of the world's series. At the New Jersey law school in Newark, a professor put the question recently to a class of forty. Some thought the ball was in the possession of the pitcher, who had it last. Others held it belonged to the batter, who hoped to hit it. Still others awarded the title to the catcher, because of his legitimate expectancy. No question was raised as to who owned it in case of a foul tip into the grandstand.

Not the Yale bowl nor the new speedways nor any of the new marvels of seating capacity built or now building in this country for money making purposes can be compared to the country's greatest show place.

LEADS ILLINI IN RACE FOR HONORS

Captain Watson of Illinois.

Watson captains the Illinois football team which is putting up a strong fight for the western conference championship. Illinois won the championship last year.

That honor belongs to the Brookside amphitheater, Cleveland, which will accommodate 100,000 persons. Woodlands, another amphitheater being constructed in the same city, is almost as large. In these places the amateur champion baseball finals of the city are played to near capacity crowds. Last year over 80,000 persons saw one contest, according to conservative estimates.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, the pride of Nebraska fans and the man who pitched the Phillies' only victory in the world's series, started in the first national game as an infielder. That was in his kid days in St. Paul, Neb., Grover's home town. Aleck played with the young Saints in those days and he estimated at second and behind the bat. It was an accident to the regular hurler that he was responsible for Grover's advent as a pitcher. Grover had a lot of steam, so he was selected as the "goat" and was called upon to take the place of the pitcher. He started with a victory and has been pitching ever since.

traction was "The House of Mystery," offered by the Jack Bessey Players. The action throughout the piece was mighty clever and full of thrills, comedy and mystery. Tonight, "The Blue Mouse" will be presented with Nell Paul in the leading role.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

There Must Be Some Fire Where There Is So Much Smoke. Miles and miles of editorials have been written about David Mark Griffith's spectacular photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which is based upon Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" and "The Leopard's Spots"—some of a southern biased view of the war and its outcome, some loud in their bitter denunciation of a work capable of starting, according to their views, severe racial hatred and antagonism. The picture opens with a murder. A figure in black slides back a panel in the wall and disappears. There are two persons that would benefit by the deed. The next he and the butler, who receives the fortune in case of the entire family's death. But it develops that the culprit is the butler's son, who is a heavy gambler.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Return Showing of "All for Old Ireland" Photographed in the picturesque Ireland of romance and history, this three-part subject made by Sidney Olcott has a rare charm that in itself is enough to assure popularity. As the action unfolds, we have a series of pictures of the Lakes of Killarney, the rocky shores of South Kerry, the Black Rock Castle on the River Lee and the famous Ballymalls Castle, built something over 600 years ago. One is delighted with the beautiful scenes—valleys, rivers winding through pasture lands and jutting rocks lashed by waves—thoroughly in keeping with the romantic story. It is a tale of heroism, set in the days when the patriotic Irish peasants were struggling against English oppression. Myles Murphy (Pat O'Malley) is the sturdy young hero, who assists in smuggling arms into the country from France and is imprisoned by English soldiers. Eileen Donaghue (Valentine Grant) becomes an important factor in his escape, effected by lowering himself on a rope suspended from a window, down the side of a high castle wall. Altogether it is an interesting, charming photoplay, and the hit of the season.
